STUDIES WESTERN IRRIGATION PLANS

Manufacturer of Curacao Preparing to Follow Treatment of Arid Lands.

LIVES ON AN ISLAND WITHOUT SINGLE RIVER

Explains the Manufacture of the Cordial That Is Used Universally.

Josh H. Delvalle, member of the firm of Delvalle Hermanos y Cia of Curacao, Dutch West Indies, stopped over in Salt Lake on Friday on his way to California. He talked interestingly at the Knutsford concerning the manufacture of the celebrated and widely consumed cordial for which the island in the Dutch West Indies was named.

"I am on my way to southern California," said he, "for the purpose of making a careful study of every detail connected with the system of irrigation that is applied to the peculiar soil found in the lower part of that State. It bears greater similarity to the soil in our island than any other part of the United States, unless perhaps I might except certain parts of the irrigated section of Wyoming."

Curacao is situated in the extreme southern part of the West Indian archipelago, and is only a short distance from the coast of Venezuela. The Danish West Indies are situated in the extreme north. Our two great industries are the growing of a peculiar orange, which is used in the distillation of the Curacao cordial, and the manufacture of a staple grade of Panama hats. You will appreciate what an immense factor this is in our commerce when I mention that our exports last year consisted of over 60,000 dozen of these hats. Most of them are used in America.

Manufacture of Curacao.
"Owing to the fact that Curacao is used in extreme moderation (by people who are familiar with its terrific potency as an inebriating beverage) there are very few who have the least idea of the process of its manufacture. In the first place, it is made only from this small tropical orange, which is grown all over the 250 square miles of the island. It is not made from the pulp, however, but from the skins, which are treated by a very difficult process, requiring much skill in their handling. The pulp has absolutely no commercial value, and is thrown away by the hundreds of tons every year. A great quantity of the skins are shipped to Holland, both by large and small shippers, and the average value is $40 per barrel.

"In the entire island of Curacao there are no rivers, and on account of the drought that parches the soil we are forced to pump our water from very deep artesian wells. The island being dotted with them everywhere. It has been proved that a finer grade of orange can be grown by irrigating the soil than by depending on an intermittent rainfall. This is the result of being able to water the trees just at the time when they are in need of it, and for this reason I am making this trip for the purpose of ascertaining the most adequate way in which to distribute water to the thousands of trees that we have in cultivation."

When asked what percentage of alcohol is contained in Curacao, Mr. Delvalle said that he could not tell, but intimated in a subtle way that if the average person not accustomed to large and small shippers, and the six instalments they would take like a four-master in the teeth of a head wind, and would find it difficult to hit the ground with their overcoat.

ALASKA REPUBLICANS ENDORSE TAFT'S BOOM

Strong Resolution in Favor of Home Rule Another Feature of Platform.

JUNEAU, Alaska, Nov. 15.—The endorsement of W. H. Taft, President Roosevelt's favorite for the Presidency, and a ringing demand for home rule are the salient features of the platform reported at the morning session of the Alaskan Republican convention today. Following the withdrawal of Governor W. B. Hoggatt's supporters yesterday the convention met promptly today and began its business without loss of any time.

The platform directs the delegates who will be chosen to the national Republican nominating convention next year to support Taft and in connection therewith the administration of President Roosevelt is endorsed. It insists that Alaska should be entitled to the benefits of the ordinance of 1787, and the compact between the original thirteen States of the Union as affecting the rights of other Territories to home rule.

THIRD COMPLAINT FILED BY LUMBER MANUFACTURERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—A third complaint of the North Pacific lumber manufacturers against various railroads was filed today with the Interstate Commerce commission. While in some respects the complaint is identical with the others, it differs materially in some features. The case is that of the Western Oregon Lumber Manufacturers' association et al., against the Southern Pacific company and the Oregon and California Railroad company. It is alleged that these defendants have increased the rates on general forest products from the Willamette valley in Oregon to San Francisco bay points an average of about 40 per cent. The railroads, it is asserted, gave as a reason for the increase, that they desired to participate in the prosperity being enjoyed by the lumber producers. The complaint alleges that the Southern Pacific company controls and operates the Oregon and California railroad under a lease and that the freight situation on the Pacific coast is such that there is practically no competition among the various lines in handling lumber products. The charges are asserted to be excessive, unjust, discriminatory and prohibitive. The commission, therefore, is asked to adjust the lumber rates on a fair and equitable basis.

POWERS'S BOOK SENT PROSPECTIVE JURORS

No Trouble to Furnish a New Sensation in Famous Kentucky Murder Case.

GEORGETOWN, Ky., Nov. 15.—The trial of Caleb Powers was largely consumed in the work of empaneling a jury from the special venire summoned from Harrison county, which arrived here this morning in charge of a deputy sheriff.

Powers was quite ill last night and the services of a physician were necessary. He has been suffering from dysentery for the last ten days, and excitement and work preparing for his trial are doubtless responsible for his breakdown. He came into court promptly, but looked pale and weak. Many ladies attended court today for the first time since the trial began. During the examination of special veniremen it developed that Harrison county had been flooded with Powers's published book, containing his speeches and account of his trials. Out of twelve prospective jurors examined fully half had received through the mail from some unknown source, copies of Powers's book, which, it appears, had been sent to various precincts from which veniremen had been summoned. The discovery caused a decided sensation in court.

Never Heard of Case.

An amusing contrast with these developments was the statement of one venireman who had never heard of or read of the noted case. The defense made a surprising move today by asking leave to summon witnesses from Harrison county to show the manner used in selecting the special jury which is now here. A sensation is said to be behind the move, as the defense claims it will be able to show that the special venire was drawn from a nothod of Goshel Democrats, in which only twenty-five Republican reside. The commission did not object, and a special bailiff was appointed to go after the witnesses.

The political complexion of the venire is eighty-three Democrats, fifteen Republicans and seven Independents. The day closed with five qualified jurors, who are yet subject to preliminary challenge by either side. Much comment was indulged in through the development of the fact that Caleb Powers's speech before the jury in his last trial, has been well distributed through the co-operation of the jury. The same one acting for the defense, while the defense has sought to show that the book regards this as the worst of the worst cases as an issue in the campaign just closed.

BLOWN THROUGH ROOF BY EXPLOSION OF GAS

Twenty-Five Persons Injured
Two Fatally, in Peculiar Accident at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 16.—About twenty-five persons were injured today, two fatally, and a dwelling house was torn to pieces, when an explosion of natural gas occurred in a house located at 103 Elm street, this city. In the fire which followed two firemen were severely burned.

Fatally Injured:
MRS. SARAH GROSSMAN, blown through the roof.
JACOB BERGMAN, blown through the roof.

Seriously Injured:
Three members of the Grossman family.
Three members of the Moidel family, which also occupied the house.
Escher Bolner, a guest of the Grossmans.

About fourteen other persons in the neighborhood received injuries with windows in their homes shattered by the concussion and plaster fell upon them.

Gas Stove Leaked.

Apparently gas had been leaking from a kitchen stove all night. Early today, when a match was struck at the lower portion of the house to light the stove, there was a terrific explosion. The house was torn to pieces. The roof was blown high into the air and the front and rear of the dwelling collapsed. Mrs. Grossman and Jacob Bergman, a boarder, apparently received the full force of the explosion, both being blown from their beds through the roof. They were fatally injured by the subsequent fall and fire.

Other members of the families, which occupied the house, were thrown from bed by the concussion and severely injured. Mr. Grossman, who struck the match, escaped with a severe but not fatal injury. Occupants in adjoining houses were injured, and for a time the entire neighborhood was in panic. The monetary loss is about $500.
